GOOD SCENTS

WRAPS UP WELL

The follow-up to Patricia Talbot's first SAOR fragrance (a hAon, which means "one" in Gaelic) is a Dó (two), a warm scent for fall and winter that comes in a beautiful bamboo box ($65). "I wanted the scent to transport my customers to a place of calm and tranquility," says the Glencoe creator of a Dó, an alcohol-free oil evoking notes of fresh neroli blossoms, sensuous cananga and the warmth of cedar and sandalwood. "In Ireland, there's a saying called 'wrap up well'—it means to get your cozy sweater, snuggle up by the fire and wrap up against the winds of the Irish sea. That's the feeling I wanted to create." Through December, 10 percent of online sales will be donated to the nonprofit Opportunity International. The Twisted Trunk, Glenview; Londo Mondo, Winnetka; Juniper, Northbrook; saorperfume.com —KO

Confidence Restored

An unparalleled hair-loss solution for both men and women debuts in Northfield.

By Kelsey Ogletree

Hair loss is a very personal, sensitive subject, as hairdressers Debbie Ansay-Martinez and Chanel Kwak learned firsthand: Ansay-Martinez lost hers to alopecia, and Kwak to Lyme disease. So when they learned of the innovative CNC Hair Rejuvenation System, they set out to be the area's exclusive purveyor of the system. This summer, the duo opened Hairlab Chicago inside Northfield's esteemed Teddie Kossow Salon. A product of Italian company Cesare Ragazzi, the Hair Rejuvenation System (from $3,500) uses 3D printing technology to create a breathable prosthetic for people with temporary or permanent hair loss. Clients come in for a 90-minute fitting, where Hairlab specialists create a replica of the scalp. They send it off to Italy, where it's handstitched with virgin hair (the process takes three months). After Hairlab installs the device with medical adhesive, "you're able to wash it like normal, work out, swim and do everyday life," Ansay-Martinez says. "This is a one-stop beauty shop, and we want [hair-loss clients] to feel like they can come somewhere everybody else can go and feel like themselves." 281 N.
